Drawing together contributions from key thinkers in the field, Northern Security and Global Politics explores how this situation has affected the Nordic-Baltic area by addressing two broad sets of questions. First, it examines what impact declining unipolarity - with a geopolitical shift to Asia, a reduced role for Europe in United States policy, and a more assertive Russia - will have on regional Nordic-Baltic security.

Overcoming political obstacles. The Ukraine crisis has brought Nordic and Baltic security perceptions closer together. However, some intricate differences remain. This is the case particularly between Finland and Estonia. While cooperation thrives in other political and economic areas, the policy divide concerning some defence issues runs deep.

Nordic cooperation on foreign and security policy has gained renewed attention in recent years. Changes in the Nordic states immediate security environment after the Ukraine crisis, as well as growing global uncertainty, have turned foreign, security and defence policy into a focal point of the Nordic agenda. In order to form a more systematic view of how the Nordic countries have been discussed in the field of research, we went through all peer-reviewed articles published by Terrorism and Political Violence, Studies in Conflict and Terrorism, and Critical Studies on Terrorism since 2022. The articles were identified by using the search function in the Taylor & Francis Online website. Nordic cooperation is also important for seeking information about EU policies for non-EU country Norway. While supporting and participating in Nordic Defence Cooperation, Norway's NATO-membership has trumped its relations with the Nordic countries as well as with the EU's Common Security and Defence Policy. The Nordic Countries and U.S. Relations Political and Economic Overview The five Nordic countries Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway, and Sweden share deep historical, linguistic, and market and the Schengen area of free movement. Nordic Security and Russia Russia has reemerged as a key security concern for the.
